

Sheriff Wants Loyal Men

SAYS NONE BUT REPUBLICANS WERE IN OFFICE WHEN HE TOOK OVER THE POLICE.

"Of course there will be criticism," said Sheriff Iaukea this afternoon, referring to the talk of his not giving Republicans enough show in the police department. "But," he continued, "I noticed that when I took charge there were none but Republicans in the police department."

"Yes, Supervisor Hustace called on me this morning, but I do not wish to say anything in regard to the interview at this time."

Sheriff Iaukea, discussing changes in the police department, said: "I want men who will be loyal to the administration. It is but natural that I should refuse to employ men who will work against my administration as sheriff. I propose to have loyal men and am making changes to that end."

The list of employees of the police department as it will stand on February 1, according to changes made by the sheriff, is now in the hands of the police committee of the Board of Supervisors for approval.

Chairman Hustace of the Board of Supervisors, who called on Sheriff Iaukea today, would not state the nature of his call. It is believed that the business had to do with the resolution recently passed by the Supervisors discouraging any removals from office for political reasons.

POLICE STATION NEEDS REPAIRS

Sheriff Iaukea this afternoon inspected the police station building with a view to making recommendations for repairs. In many of the rooms the plaster is in a most dangerous condition and the roof leaks into the judge's room and elsewhere every time it rains. The construction of the latest addition to the building seems to have been faulty.

Overruled De Bolt In Lanai Case

SUPREME COURT HELD THAT CIRCUIT JUDGE ERRED IN WITHDRAWING INTERLOCUTORY.

The Supreme Court overruled Judge De Bolt's recent order withdrawing the interlocutory decree and order of appeal from that decree in the Lanai land injunction case. That is the Supreme Court did not, in exactly so many words, overrule the judge's recent order, but it ignored that order, holding that the circuit judge had no right to make such order for the matter had passed from his jurisdiction. In consequence of this ruling by the court this morning, the argument on the appeal from Judge De Bolt's opinion overruling the defendant's demurrer will come up before the Supreme Court tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

This morning the Supreme Court heard proceedings in the matter of a motion by Judge Gear in behalf of L. L. McCandless, to dismiss the appeal of the government. Judge Gear, during the course of his address to the court, read the "roast" made by Judge De Bolt relative to the Attorney General, in making the order withdrawing the interlocutory decree and order of appeal. The inquiry from Gear as to whether this part of the matter should be read caused evident amusement to the court.

F. W. Milverton of the Attorney General's department read the answer of the Attorney General to the motion, in which it was stated that the order made by Judge De Bolt had been done at the written application of L. L. McCandless, the appellee in the case.

Gear made quite an extended argument in which it was contended that the court had the right to withdraw such order; that the method adopted by the Attorney General in securing such decree had been improper and opposed to the rules of the court, furthermore that no notice of intention to take such decree had been served on him, Gear, and that the Attorney General representing the losing side, had prepared the decree that the other side should have prepared; furthermore that the decree as prepared did not conform to the opinion of the lower court in the matter.

The Supreme Court denied the motion. It held that the lower court had lost its jurisdiction after the appeal had been taken to the higher court and it had no further control over it. The court further held that while no doubt it would have been better practice to have given notice, still such course was not necessary absolutely, as the court was not bound to give notice to either side when it signed a decree, any more than when it signed a decision. Relative to the nonconformity of the decree to the opinion of the lower court, it was held that that was a non-essential point in the present instance.

Justice Hartwell gave an interesting discussion upon proper methods of practice in the courts, referring to some decisions respecting them. The justice pointed out that the question of notifying opposing counsel in such instances was frequently one of discretion; there might also be instances, although the justice did not mean to imply that the present case was one, when ex parte injunction matters might cause trouble and harm.

Arguments on the appeal will come up tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock before the Supreme Court.

Diamond Heads Get The Place

The Diamond Heads have had their wish come true. Next season they can enter a team in the major league, and try for the baseball championship of the islands. The trustees have said it. This morning in accordance with the resolution made by the league the Trustees met to consider whether they would purchase the Oahu's interest in the League or not. The Trustees decided that $500 was $500 and that if it was forthcoming it would have to be from their jeans until there were enough gate receipts taken in next season to reimburse them. So they put the kibosh on it.

Now it so happens that Frank Thompson is the business agent of the Oahu, and he hurried around to the Diamond Head representatives and told them that their chance had come. He told them they might buy for $500. And they said they would. They have until 5 o'clock tonight to pungle up the maxims.

Big Money For Harbors Of Hawaii

Appropriations are coming Hawaii's way. This morning Governor Carter received a cablegram from Delegate Kuhl Kalaniana'ole, who is now in Washington, relative to the appropriations for the harbors at Honolulu and Hilo.

Kuhl's dispatch indicates that the Associated Press cablegram received this morning stating that the harbors were to receive an appropriation of $200,000 each was incorrect. The harbors are according to Kuhl, if the bill passes, to receive just double the amount. The cablegram is as follows:

J. P. Cooke Tells Of New Zealand

HE RETURNED FROM THE "LABORATORY OF SOCIOLOGY" MUCH IMPROVED IN HEALTH, AND GREATLY INTERESTED IN THE LAND AND OTHER EXPERIMENTS GOING ON THERE—DISAPPOINTED IN SOME THINGS BUT BELIEVES IN OTHERS.

"No, I didn't come back a radical," good. Of late they have had exceptionally high prices for their wool clip trip to New Zealand, "the laboratory of sociology." "But I did find a very great deal that interested me profoundly, though in some respects, I must say that I came back with a feeling of disappointment."

"I was particularly interested in the features of their radical legislation, that when I learned exactly what it was there was something at least a little disappointing about it. "New Zealand is a wonderful country, and is enjoying a seemingly wonderful prosperity. But this must be a matter of fact, in the past a very large country for the past fourteen years the country has had a wonderful succession of fruitful years. Crops have been
